In addition to the above twelve executive committee members from the state-at-large are to be appointed by Chairman Clay.

Macon, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—The democratic state convention did its work and adjourned in less than four hours today.

It was the most harmonious, enthusiastic convention ever held in Georgia. There was no bickering, no strife. Everything was done with a unanimity seldom equaled.

Governor Atkinson and all the state officers were re-nominated by acclamation. The delegates at large were elected by the unanimous vote of the convention, and the platform for free coinage, 16 to 1, by this country, independent of others, was adopted with enthusiasm.

There were no calls for an aye and no vote. On everything, everybody was agreed and the convention did its work well and quickly.

For a democratic convention in a state with as many orators in it as Georgia, there was less oratory and more solid business than has ever been known.

The few gold delegates showed themselves to be good party men—to hold democracy above all things. Two gold members of the committee on platform modestly put themselves on record against the silver plank, but made no noise of it. Every man in the convention agreed to abide its acts and support the nominee of the party at Chicago.

The unit rule was adopted and the two former gold men on the delegation agreed to vote for a silver platform and a silver candidate at Chicago.

A protest was made by some of the silver delegates from the eleven against confirming the election of Mr. C. R. Pendleton, of Lowndes, as a delegate. But a friend of Mr. Pendleton's spoke for him and pledged him to act as the majority of the delegates dictated. For a moment it looked like the convention would repudiate Mr. Pendleton's selection, but Captain Evan P. Howell took the floor and declared that the delegates from the eleven had a right to choose whoever they wanted to represent them, provided he would abide the instructions of the convention. Mr. Pendleton had agreed to do this. Mr. Pendleton had tried to read him out of the party for being for silver. That was of no consequence. He believed in home rule, and as Mr. Pendleton had agreed to vote as the convention dictated, his election should be confirmed. Captain Howell's speech was received with enthusiasm and the convention, by a large majority, confirmed Mr. Pendleton.

Next to the unanimity and enthusiasm, the most remarkable feature of the convention was the fact that not one time, by either silver or gold delegates, was the national administration referred to. The delegates were looking to the future—preparing for the glorious victory which the democratic party is entitled to and will achieve.

Another remarkable fact was that no man who holds office of any kind was elected as a delegate to Chicago.

The thermometer in the Academy of Music, where the convention was held, stood around the 100 mark during the session of the convention, notwithstanding a dozen electric fans. On account of the intense heat, nominating speeches were limited to two minutes, and only one of them consumed that much time. The delegates were all one way on everything. So Chairman Steve Clay rushed things; the convention aided him and before 4 o'clock the work was done and the delegates and candidates were packing their bags and rushing for the first train.

Macon was intensely warm, but the people evidenced the greatest hospitality and the delegates were much pleased with their treatment.

Almost every prominent politician in the state was present at the convention. From the congressional delegation, ex-Speaker Crisp, Senator Bacon, Judge Bartlett, Colonel Livingston, Mr. Moses and Mr. Tate were on-lookers. Of course the governor and all the state officers and nearly all the judges and solicitors in the state were present.

The story of the convention in detail is told below:

THE STORY IN DETAIL.

What the Convention Did and How It Went About the Work.

Macon, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—High meridian found the Academy of Music packed with the men of Georgia who had gathered therein for attention to business of state. For an hour previous the delegates had been pouring in, so that when the well-known figure of Uncle Bob Hardeman was seen moving down the central aisle simultaneously with the appearance of Chairman Clay upon the stage, a mighty cheer went up in acknowledgment of which both gentlemen bowed, and the Georgia state convention of 1896 was ready for business.

The auditorium of the Academy of Music was decorated with the national colors, artistically disposed. The seats were told off into congressional districts and were numbered so that every delegate was assured of a seat. In the rear were the seats reserved for the alternates. The stage, upon which were gathered distinguished gentlemen of state and groups of beautiful ladies, who graced the scene, was decorated in highly creditable manner, the front bearing the inscription, "Welcome to democrats."

When Chairman Clay had gained the attention of the convention he introduced Rev. Dr. McKay to open the proceedings with prayer. This he did from manuscript, imploring the Lord to "take from the minds of the servants all mean ambitions," and to dispose them to the work for the good of their kind, "so that evils feared might be averted."

The opening services consisted of addresses from citizens of Macon, in which Mayor Daisy Price introduced Hon. John T. Boileau to speak for him. This Mr. Boileau did in a most graceful manner, welcoming the delegates to a city which was "the pink of the south, the rose of the world, and whose mayor was a daisy." "You have assembled here under the folds of the national banner," continued Mr. Boileau. Under it Washington marched to victory; it waved over Valley Forge, and now that morning is breaking at Chicago, it will float over democratic victory."

Amid the inspiring strains of the band and the applauding cheers of the convention, Mr. Boileau withdrew, and Mr. Roland Ellis was presented to further extend the welcome of the Central City.

"I desire," said he, "to welcome to this stronghold of stalwart democracy, the state convention. For thirty years this is the first time that you have met with us, but here you will find that you are in the home of brothers, whose democracy has never faltered, and which needs no patronage to keep it true. I welcome you to the home of the honored Bacon and of the beloved Bartlett—the home of honest democratic bimetalism of gold and silver."

This drew the first enthusiastic cheering of the day, because it touched upon the chord to which the people had responded. It was a magnificent ovation which was given the young orator.

"Allow me," he said in conclusion, "to present you with a gavel, emblematic of the fight which we have won—composed of sixteen parts of silver to one part of gold."

Chairman Clay's Speech.

The preliminary speaking being thus concluded, Chairman Clay was heartily applauded as he stepped forward and said: "I declare the democratic state convention now opened." As he proceeded with his speech it was liberally punctuated with approving cheers.

"I am a sound money democrat," he said. "Every dollar should be equally valuable; gold and silver, at the ratio of 16 to 1, gives the best money in the world."

It was thus that he led up to the declaration to which Georgians now pin their faith, the cheers of the delegates growing in intensity as he unfolded his views.

The speech, in full, is as follows: "Gentlemen of the Convention: As chairman of the democratic executive committee of this state it becomes my duty, as well as my pleasure, to call this convention to order and preside until a temporary chairman can be elected. I ask that you will hear me for a few minutes that I may speak a few words in encouragement of our party in this state. This is the first time I have had the pleasure of calling a democratic convention together or being a delegate to one in the city of Macon."

"To my recollection it is the first state convention that has convened in Macon since the war. It is an honor that I appreciate to preside over this state democratic convention in the hospitable, genial and progressive city of Macon. The courtesy that has been extended to us by the committee of arrangements is appreciated and will never be forgotten. When the state democratic executive committee convened in Atlanta a few months ago, a delegation came from the city of Macon asking that the state convention be held in the Central City. The committee by a majority vote decided in favor of this city. We were assured then that if we came here we might expect at the hands of the democrats of the county of Bibb in the next state and national elections 2,500 majority for our ticket. I hope the

Mr. Whitney's Sectional Plea.

There is an element of absolute unpopularity in Mr. Whitney's recent proclamation, or pronouncement, or whatever it may be termed, that gives to the affair considerable interest.

We do not at the present moment recall a similar proceeding on the part of any American citizen whose views had not been sought in a formal and definite way. It is to be borne in mind that Mr. Whitney is a private citizen, that he has never, since as a party leader in the larger sense. It is true that by easy methods of manipulation and wire-pulling he succeeded in nominating Mr. Cleveland—a feat in which no patriotic man, it seems to us, could take any pride—but he has never cut any figure as a promoter or a believer in genuine democratic principles.

Moreover, he is not a candidate for any office, and has never had any more chance of becoming a real leader of the party than the immortal "J. N." who went about the country "lifting the veil" some years ago. Therefore, his recent proclamation to the people is absolutely unwise.

It is precisely this fact, however, that gives it such interest as it possesses. It is unique in a way that usually touches the risibles of the American population, which is prone to find food for its humor in the most unexpected places.

Apart from this the proclamation has one strange and amazing feature. It is purely sectional. It is a special plea for sectionalism of the most distressing type. The pronouncement has been many weeks in preparation, and a very serious effort has been made to dress the sectionalism that is the basis of it in such gay and festive attire that it will escape attention. But the bones stick out. The cadaver shows plainly under the trimmings.

Politely, pleasantly and with the air of a dancing master, Mr. Whitney announces that he is a sectionalist. He stands for the northeast, with its money power, its gold syndicates, its trusts, its gigantic monopolies and its combined corporations. He is not only a sectionalist, but, under cover of his affability, a very arrogant one. Politely, but yet boldly, he asks the people of the great middle west, the west and the south, to surrender their convictions and support the views of the moneyed classes of the northeast.

Amiably, and yet firmly, he announces to the public that he is going to Chicago for the purpose of turning the two-thirds majority of the democratic convention into supporters of the gold standard, coupled with a contemptible subterfuge in regard to "international bimetallicism." He declares that he has a distinct hope of making this northeastern sectionalism so powerful that all the rest of the country will bend the knee to it. He sweetens his aggressive demand that the rest of the country submit to northeastern sectionalism by declaring that by such submission alone can the voters of that section be prevailed on to support the party.

But he closes his eye to the fact that, as matters stand, submission to the sectionalism of the northeast would be the signal for the disbanding of the democratic organization. He forgets, too, that the northeast, with the exception of New York, (which the democrats are sure to carry on a free coinage platform party.)

Mr. Whitney cannot impose a policy of sectionalism on the democratic party at this late day. It has fought republican sectionalism too long to be now brought to its knees at the foot of the throne of the northeastern money power. The party might just as well be expected to endorse the St. Louis platform entire as to endorse a paraphrase of the financial plank approved by Mr. Morgan, head of the Rothschild gold syndicate.

The democratic party is not now and never has been a sectional party. Its principles have been overshadowed and obscured for a time by the strenuous discussion of issues appertaining to the war; but those war issues no longer attract attention. They have had their day, and the time has now arrived to consider genuine democratic principles which stand for the greatest good of all men and for the rights and interests of every voter of all sections.

Silver in New York State.

What is this we hear from New York? In a democratic convention, elected and organized by the machine for the sole purpose of making a declaration in behalf of the gold standard, free coinage shows its head and is not afraid to make itself heard!

But that is not all. The silver movement, which is only another name for the revival of genuine democracy, has made such headway in New York state that such men as Hill and Whitney who are dominated by the money power are amazed. The headlines over a Saratoga dispatch in The New York Herald declare: "Silver gaining in this state. Western county delegates say it is strong republicans will be badly hurt. It affects both parties. Free coinage literature disseminated among the farmers and making many converts."

Think of that! The silver movement sweeping over the state like a tidal wave, and Whitney and Hill arranging to deceive the people with a plank about "international bimetallicism." It is a bait for fools, and even in New York state, the headquarters of the money power and of the gold syndicates and of the trusts and corporation combines, the people are not fools enough to be gulled by it this year.

The Herald's correspondent is informed by men who, acting under orders from Wall street, are for gold and nothing else, that in southwestern, northern and central New York, the silver movement has swept in among the people "like an apparition."

"It must not be supposed," remarks the correspondent reassuringly, "that because the silver sentiment has come up strong in so many counties the democratic state convention is in favor of free silver. The machine, which believes in the gold standard, elected the delegates, but only by personal appeals were many of the county conventions prevented from declaring for the white metal."

The gold machine elected the delegates, and yet many of the delegates declare that when they vote for gold they will carry them out!

But such is the power of the gold syndicate that these delegates are perfectly willing to misrepresent and betray the honest voters who elected them.

Ex-State Senator Gray made this declaration to a reporter of The Journal: "I venture to say that if the convention were polled, three-fourths of the members would be found to be pronouncedly in favor of bimetallicism of the most radical type."

Thus in the face of the fact that an overwhelming majority of the honest voters of New York state are in favor of the free coinage of silver, the gold machine will control the utterances of the convention, and the machine-made declaration dictated by the hirelings of the money power will be quoted as representing the great democratic party of New York, and the democratic delegates assembled at Chicago will be asked by Whitney and Hill to give to this fake utterance the weight and significance that would attach to it if it really represented the honest belief and sentiment of the democratic party of New York state!

How weak the cause that must depend on such dishonest methods, and how contemptible the men who are willing to carry them out!

But the people are aroused. They can no longer be deceived by the schemes of those employed by the money power to manipulate conventions and to secure machine-made declarations indorsing the greed of the money sharks. The honest voters of the country will settle the money question this year, and they will settle it justly and fairly. They will not allow any political party, or the greed of the money power, or fake declarations, or hireling politicians, or discredited "statesmen," so-called, or doubtful platforms.

At Chicago the representatives of the democratic party will declare for the free independent and unlimited coinage of silver, and with this declaration the party will sweep the country, carrying even New York by a majority large enough to discredit the manipulators who yesterday compelled the machine-elected delegates to indorse the hypocrisy of "international bimetallicism."

Mexico and Diaz.

The re-election of Diaz as president of the Mexican republic is a political event of more than ordinary importance to this country.

It is not invidious to say that Diaz is one of the most remarkable men of the present generation. The Mexicans recognize in him a wise leader; and, though he has held the office which he now occupies for several terms, he is still regarded on account of his rare public virtues as the most available man for the position.

Under the administration of Diaz, Mexico has enjoyed an era of unbroken prosperity. The growth of the republic has been promoted by immigration from other countries, while business and manufacturing enterprises have sprung up all over the land.

Since the administration of President Diaz has been at least coincident with this prosperity he is entitled to much of the credit which is derived therefrom. His reputation is that of the ablest and most sagacious statesman of Mexico and there is no one who holds a warmer place in the affections of the people.

elect president of the republic, while Diaz was made president of the judicial council.

Improving the opportunity which this election gave him, Diaz made quite an extensive tour of the United States.

In 1884 he was again elected president, and the constitution was so amended as to give him the right of succession. This amendment, however, did not go into effect until after his election, and it was held that he was eligible for re-election in 1888 and also in 1892. His popularity is unbounded and his re-election to the presidency is a deserved compliment to his magnificent administration of the affairs of his country.

Father B. J. Kelley.

The announcement that Father B. J. Kelley, vicar general and pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, is soon to be transferred from Atlanta to Savannah, has been received with profound regret by his numerous friends and admirers in this city.

Father Kelley has labored in this city for the last ten years. His unselfish devotion to the welfare of the church over which he presided has won for him the respect and love of all true Catholics; while the blameless life which he has led in this community has endeared him to thousands beyond the immediate circle of his religious faith.

In its broadest sense, Father Kelley has illustrated the catholicity of the Christian religion, and the influence which he has exercised upon the life of this city will be felt for years to come.

The best wishes of thousands in Atlanta will follow this gifted and beloved pastor into his new field of labor.

New Jersey's Political Fortunes.

The nomination of Garrett A. Hobart for the high office of vice president of the United States will render the little commonwealth of New Jersey conspicuous in the campaign of 1896.

New Jersey has always labored under the disadvantage of being small. This fact has denied her more than one coveted plum from the national orchard; and year by year as she has watched the distribution of prizes which have fallen to the share of larger, if not more deserving states, she has realized, in the measure of a bitter disappointment, that her greatest drawback was not a lack of favorite sons but simply a lack of geographical proportions.

Political necessities often give rise to invidious distinctions. Each party organization finds it necessary to carry the larger states of the union in order to win success at the polls; and hence it is that many of the smaller states are overlooked.

For the last twenty-five or thirty years the honors of the nation have been divided chiefly between Ohio and New York, while Maryland, Rhode Island, Delaware and New Jersey have been obliged to shift for themselves. In a political sense, they have been treated with supreme indifference.

With the nomination of Garrett A. Hobart, however, one of her millionaire statesmen and leading corporation lawyers, New Jersey has reached a turning point in the long political line which she has traveled. Hence the jubilant manner in which she celebrated Hobart's nomination several days ago. But little election demonstrations mean very little, and chances are that Hobart's own state will carry its electoral vote for the democratic presidential ticket.

In this connection it may be interesting to inquire into the past political fortunes of New Jersey. Notwithstanding her small population and restricted area, she has furnished to the nation two justices of the supreme court, William Patterson and Joseph P. Bradley; one secretary of state, Frederick T. Frelinghuysen; three secretaries of the navy, Samuel L. Southard, Mahlon Dickerson and George M. Roberson; one minister to France, William L. Dayton, and two ministers to Germany, William Walter Phelps and Theodore Runyon.

In 1890, when the nomination of William Harrison, the vice presidential nomination was offered Samuel L. Southard, of New Jersey, who declined it. It was then conferred upon John Tyler, of Virginia, who became president in a few months on the death of William Harrison. Had Southard accepted the second place on the ticket, he would have occupied the presidential chair—the only opportunity a man from his state ever had.

There is no need to look through your spectacles to see where old Georgia stands.

We might claim a victory for The Constitution. But it is far more than that. It is a victory for the people.

Disgruntled democrats no longer have a limb to roost on. The old party's all right—as it always is when the people come to the front.

Something has been said about precedents. But principles are more important than precedents.

The free coinage democrats at Chicago will have the whole thing by the time the convention meets.

Mr. McKinley is welcome to make the tariff issue—if he can. He is already defeated.

Hill and Whitney didn't dare to poll the Saratoga convention on the silver question.

The attention of earnest prohibitionists is called to the fact that McKinley wants a "full" dollar.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The water of the river Jordan may be good enough for baptismal purposes, but when it comes to a use of the sacred fluid as a beverage it is not quite so efficacious. In the opinion of medical experts Archduke Karl, of Austria, who died some time ago, came to his death by drinking the water of this scriptural stream. The statement of these physicians has been supported by a thorough microscopic examination. A drop of this water has been found to contain a large percentage of impure animal matter, mostly that of reptiles. In addition to this disclosure the decay of vegetable matter along the banks of the stream has had a vitiating and baneful effect upon the water. Though hundreds and perhaps thousands have used the fluid in performing the sacred rite of baptism, emulating in this respect the example of John the Baptist, no one has used it for drinking purposes, so far as investigation has thrown any light upon the subject, except Archduke Karl.

The testimony of the microscope in regard to its unwholesomeness, and it is found to consist largely of sewage, with little or no water, and with a large amount of the archduke died, and however sacred the associations of that venerated river, it is apparent that its waters are not fit to drink, even as an act of devotion. Of their baptismal efficacy there is no occasion to express any doubt, and it is strongly believed in by many people, both of the old and of the new dispensation. Talmage believed in it, and baptized a Kansas man in its floods, selecting a spot consecrated by the most sacred associations which can be conceived. It is not known how the Kansas man turned out, nor whether he swallowed any of the water, but the evidence that Talmage did not does not admit of dispute. The archduke of Austria had poor constitutions, anyhow, and if any man moved to the river, he would never get it should be under medical rather than ecclesiastical advisement.

The oldest obelisk in the world is the one of rose-colored granite which stands on the walls of every tomb. In Cairo. It is the gravestone of a great city which has vanished, leaving only this relic behind. This city is called in the Bible Bethshalem, as usual thereafter. Nearly two thousand years ago, the city of the sun, because there the worship of the sun had its chief center and its most sacred shrines, was known as Heliopolis, the city of the sun, because there the worship of the sun had its chief center and its most sacred shrines. The obelisk which we now behold on the spot, it alone has survived the wreck of all the glory of the place. It was constructed by Thutmose III, who is supposed to have reigned about B. C. and has outlived all the dynastic changes of the land, and yet stands where it originally stood nearly forty-seven centuries ago. What a monument to the power of the sun! It is buried in the mud of the Nile, and year after year the inundation of the Nile deposits its filth upon it and its foot and buries it still deeper in the sacred grave.

A veteran Englishman, Henry Clarkson, died a few days ago. He remembered reading in The London Gazette the story of the death of George III. By profession a surveyor, he was employed by the government to survey the route of the new railway of the most inviting and picturesque scenes of England. That was during the early days of railroading on the island. As it happened, he was the owner of the property, Sir William Pilkington, who threatened to have him committed for trespass. The country squires and baronets would not have him on their land, and the people ruled. Sir William informed Clarkson that when he himself wanted to go to London he could travel in his own deposit, but that his neighbors had no carriage didn't occur to him.

STATE POLITICAL NOTES.

Speaking of Senator Mercer, The Dawson News says:

"We believe the good man will come back again after July 7th, and while he remembers about someone and disconsolate for the next few days we are going to keep his seat on the free silver band warm and reserved. There will be room in that velvet cushion for the free silver band, and when Jess and the other recalcitrants are comfortably seated we will move forward, and the music of drums and rattling of cymbals in a victorious charge."

The Brunswick Evening Advertiser says that it is understood that Colonel W. G. Brantley will immediately resign the solicitorship of the Brunswick in Georgia, to prevent the local interest centers upon the appointment to fill the unexpired term. It is generally regarded that competing candidates for the position are Mr. W. G. Brantley and Mr. J. M. Brantley, who is a son of the late Mr. W. G. Brantley, and is a prominent farmer and is thirty-four years old.

The Stone Mountain correspondent of The Winston Herald says:

"The goldbugs of our town were that never did long to that tribe. Colonel W. G. Brantley, who is a son of the late Mr. W. G. Brantley, and is a prominent farmer and is thirty-four years old."

Paul Turner, the nominee for the legislature in Henry, is postmaster at McDonough, chairman of the democratic executive committee, a prominent farmer and is thirty-four years old.

The democrats of Cobb county will hold a primary July 25th to nominate candidates for the legislature, county officers, a new executive committee and to express a preference for United States senator.

The Cartersville Courier-American says that the friends of the gold standard in that city are still urging him to make the race for the legislature and he will probably consent to the use of his name.

WITH GEORGIA EDITORS.

The Savannah Progress says that it has heretofore been a remarkable fact that Sandeenville has always given a very heavy vote to the gold standard, and the lists have been at a loss to understand why it is ever thus. The Progress has compiled a list of thirty voters in Sandeenville, whose average weight is 200 pounds, and the aggregate is 6,000 pounds, or three tons. With this heavy voting battalion, aided by the lighter forces, the vote of Sandeenville always falls with a heavy thud on the populist districts that give a majority for that party, and is sufficient to paralyze the minorities from Giles, Tiger and Tabernacle.

The Covington Enterprise has this interesting personal note:

"Mr. Reuben Cook, one of our best and oldest citizens, who has been the Mexican war and is now over eighty years old, was in town Monday. He is a strong believer in the gold standard, and the populist lists have been at a loss to understand why it is ever thus. Mr. Whitney is welcome to make the tariff issue—if he can. He is already defeated.

Hill and Whitney didn't dare to poll the Saratoga convention on the silver question.

The attention of earnest prohibitionists is called to the fact that McKinley wants a "full" dollar.

Disgruntled democrats no longer have a limb to roost on. The old party's all right—as it always is when the people come to the front.

Something has been said about precedents. But principles are more important than precedents.

The free coinage democrats at Chicago will have the whole thing by the time the convention meets.

JUST FROM GEORGIA.

Sweet Katharine!

It seemeth, Katharine, that thine art Hath witched away my trusting heart, Albeit thou play'st a fickle part.

Sweet Katharine, sweet Katharine! Thy face reflected is in streams;

Thou smilest in the morning's beams; Thou art the music of my dreams.

Sweet Katharine, sweet Katharine! Such music is there in one word From Katharine's lips of crimson heard

As shames the sweetest singing-bird, Sweet Katharine, sweet Katharine!

And yet, unpoken is today I cannot win that word I have said From Katharine, sweet Katharine!

Thy lips do lingeringly dwell Upon that word I love so well; Thou dallest with a syllable,

Sweet Katharine, sweet Katharine! And so, 'twixt hope and deep despair Love hath a cross too hard to bear,

And thy white hands have nailed him there, Sweet Katharine, sweet Katharine!

The Author's Guild Bulletin will suspend for the next two months, but will resume publication as usual thereafter. Nearly all the authors in the United States are entertaining their friends at their hands during the dog days. The Bulletin will come up smiling when the said editors go to spitting rails again!

A Note by the Way.

Life was a desert. Save that one sweet spring Tinkles and sels

The birds to caroling. Life was a desert. Save that one green tree Spreadeth its branches

Over you and me. Know—since thy steps May in a desert be, Love is the spring

And love the living tree! When the doctor told the dying editor that his "circulation was very low," the editor whispered with his last breath: "Don't let my contemporary know it; I've always sworn to the largest circulation in the county!"

His Qualifications.

"Jim's done graduated, ain't he?" "You bet!" "Got his diploma?"

"Well, what kin he do?" "Reach home base every time, an' kick a football clean over into the next county!"

We hear very little of Aubrey Beardsley now. Why does he not come forward and devote his delicious talents to illustrating the red rag of Mr. Stephen Crane's heroes? No one but Mr. Beardsley would be equal to the task.

Down with Him!

"Hot-hot! Is it not?" "Shoot the fellow on the spot! Strike him fair,

Here or there— On his spot, or anywhere! On creation he's a blot With that question: 'Ain't it hot?' When the sun is climbing higher

And just raining down his fire, And you feel, with weary groans, Just like sitting in your bones— 'Hot-hot! Is it not?' (Strike him fair, Here or there— On the spot, or anywhere!) The Judge Meant Business.

Suppose all the candidates in Georgia were made of Judge Hart's mettle? When the judge cast his vote recently he went into the country on private business. While riding along he saw an industrious farmer cutting grain by the roadside of whom he asked the way to the next town.

"No," said he, "my crop needs me and I cannot leave."

Whereupon the gallant and patriotic judge dismounted and asked him to take his horse, ride to town and vote, while he himself labored in his stead.

The farmer returned the sweat upon the face of his honor and the sheaves he had gathered plainly told he had kept his promise.

That's the kind of candidate who "works his way."

BOIES REPLIES TO WHITNEY.

He Shows That the People Will Not Stand a Straddle.

Waterloo, Ia., June 23—There is no ring of uncertainty in Horace Boies's reply to Mr. Whitney's address to the national convention. The leading candidate of the silver democracy for the presidency said to me today:

"Mr. Whitney's statement unquestionably gives correctly and in most forcible terms the objections of leading democrats of the east to a plank in the national platform, which would place the democratic party at the foot of a silver standard, and the party lists have been at a loss to understand why it is ever thus. The Progress has compiled a list of thirty voters in Sandeenville, whose average weight is 200 pounds, and the aggregate is 6,000 pounds, or three tons. all the actual necessities of life, while the present standard, with its consequent depreciation of the market price of the products of labor, is crushing the very life out of another class, vastly greater in number.

"It is evident, too, from Mr. Whitney's statement, that he entirely overlooks the fact that it is no new advantage or relief that the friends of silver are demanding."

"All they ask is that the law shall be made to restore to the people of this union what the law has taken away from them, and that, too, in violation of the plain spirit of the constitution upon which our government is based."

"Neither does he seem to give weight to the fact that there is no disposition upon the part of the friends of silver to avoid a scrupulous observance of both the letter and spirit of every contract that has heretofore been made, whether national, state, corporate or individual."

"What they do object to, and rightfully, is the proposition that these obligations shall be changed by law and made payable in a currency that requires double the human effort to obtain the currency in which, by their own express terms or by the terms of the law in force when they were assumed, they are made payable."

104,400 SHARES WERE SOLD

The Wife of Major McKinley.

Mrs. William McKinley, Jr., who is an honored friend in the McKinley household, tells a pretty story of the courtship of the man who is the republican nominee for the presidency, and tells, too, of their home life in Canton. In telling the story the "Field Marshal" writes:

The wife of the nominee of the republican party for president is one of the gentlest of women. Her maiden name was Ida Saxton. Her father was editor and proprietor of the Canton, O., Repository and a banker, and was prosperous in his affairs. His daughter was bright in mind and beautiful in person, and he gave her rare business. I would rather live here than where I must have less of his society." She added tender words as to his devotion to her, and unaffectedly considered that there were privations in store for her if her husband was to be burdened by the great cares of the great office. The day after the nomination of her husband for the presidency, the friend with whom she had this conversation approached and asked:

"Well, Mrs. McKinley, are you going to be in opposition to your husband's administration?" She smiled archly and said: "No, I shall have to give that up," and she did not seem to be worried much even about those desolated flower beds and the dusty velvet of the trampled grass.

Mrs. McKinley has been for years, indeed, during nearly the whole period of her husband's national public services, an invalid, but she yet wears the appearance and has the grace and attractiveness of youth.

Two daughters were born to the McKinleys. One died as a little baby, and the other reached the age of four years before the angels came for her, and the broken health of the mother dates from the loss of the child.

It is marked by all who know her that while it is possible her strength will not permit her to have personal charge of all the ceremonies over which the lady of the white house presides, she will be, if those functions become her part as the partner advantages in education, including a visit to Europe, and, believing that she ought to know his business, and that it would not be the better way for her to marry in early youth, he had her duly installed as the cashier of his bank. About this time a handsome young man returned from the big war a hero at twenty-two years of age, the friend of Sheridan, Hayes, Crook, Comey, Rosecrans, Matthews and all the true soldiers who knew him.

Canton noticed that this handsome young man, who had enlisted a private at seventeen years of age, had returned a major, and had studied law and had been elected prosecuting attorney, found it very much in the way to pass the Saxton bank when going to and returning from his duties at the courthouse. It happened that the desk of the cashier was near a window that admitted a good deal of light and air, and was illuminated about the time the major passed by the fair face of the daughter of the editor and banker.

The marriage of William McKinley to Ida Saxton took place in 1871 and they first kept house in the pretty residence that is their home now—where Mrs. McKinley's beautiful beds of flowers were so ruthlessly destroyed Thursday night by a multi-tude mad with joy and rabid for relief, regarding the persons with such affection as to tear them away by the roots and carry them away, stalks, dirt and all.

It was a great pleasure to Mr. and Mrs. McKinley, after twenty years in Washington and Columbus, to go back to the house where they spent the first years of their united lives, and Mrs. McKinley fondly hoped her husband had departed permanently from the services of the public and be content to work for himself and be more and more her companion. On the day before her nomination she said with the utmost sincerity:

"I am not in favor of this presidential of her husband in high destiny, a pleasant figure, gracious and penitent, with the kind, honest and sympathetic tenderness of a sprightly individuality, that survives her sufferings with a charm all its own.

It is the story of Canton that Mrs. McKinley's daughter, when he had to take into consideration the subject of his daughter's marriage, that he would rather she remained single, but, while he yielded this preference, he would give up Ida to no man on earth but Major McKinley, and the judgment of the old gentleman has been justified.

On the eventful Thursday last, while the telephone and telegraph wires were telling Major McKinley and his household the news from St. Louis, Mrs. McKinley sat in the parlor, surrounded by relatives and near friends—the nearest and dearest of all the major's mother, now eighty-seven years of age—and when the major, in his office across the hall, heard the announcement, "Ohio, McKinley, 46," and the annotation of one present, "that nominates you," he walked silently and simply across the hall and kissed his wife, saying, "Ida, Ohio's vote has just nominated me."

At the Governor's Mansion.

Tonight the members of the Atlanta division of the Southern Literature Library Association are to have a rare treat in the address of Mr. Hooper Alexander on the subject, "Georgia's Writers of Law: Her Statesmen and Historians."

Miss Eva Frasier will present an interesting talk on Georgia authors also, and Mrs. Ellis, who as Miss Leonora Beck has won so many laurels as a Georgia writer, will be present. Mrs. Atkinson cordially invites all interested in southern literature to attend the meeting at the mansion to-night.

The entertainment tonight, June 26th, for the benefit of the First Christian church, promises to be a most enjoyable occasion. The music will be in charge of Professor Dunwoody, assisted by Sam Burbank and Mrs. Hatch. Readings by Miss Ada Evelyn Lewis.

The programme will close with a bright little comedy entitled "Striking Oil," with the following cast of characters:

will take place promptly at 8:45 o'clock, immediately after which the couple will leave for a trip north. Miss Reese is a niece to the Hon. Seal Reese, and her mother is a sister to the late Rev. Sam Burney. Miss Reese is one of Madison's most popular and beautiful young ladies. She is a graduate of Shorter college. The highest words of praise would fall to do her justice. Mr. Rosser is one of Eaton's most successful and enterprising young business men and has the confidence and esteem of every one. He has risen steadily in his business undertakings since commencing in business a few years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Rosser will live in Eaton.

Hogansville, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—Hogansville has had a trio of pretty weddings yesterday. At 2:30 o'clock a. m. D. J. Daniel and Miss Kate Higginer were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony, Rev. B. M. Packer, of West Point, officiating. The happy couple boarded the 10 o'clock train for an extended tour through the north.

About the same hour Claude E. Smith, a prominent business young man of Carrollton, and Miss Maymie Loftin were united in marriage by the same minister. This couple left immediately for the groom's home in Carrollton.

A. C. Hayes, ticket agent and telegraph operator at this place, was happily wedded to Miss Paretha Reid, at 8:30 o'clock p. m. Rev. T. S. Edwards performing the ceremony.

These three couples are among the most popular of our social circle.

Marietta, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—Judge and Mrs. George F. Guber Tuesday evening at their home on Cherokee street celebrated their crystal wedding with one of the most elegant receptions ever given in Marietta.

Both Judge Guber and his wife are natives of this county and have made their home from childhood and can count their personal friends by scores. Judge Guber, who is recognized by all to be one of the finest lawyers and judges in the state, was born and reared in Cobb county, and

Some of the city needs more than $100,000 during the summer, and it may be that another offer will be made soon like the first, or, perhaps, at a little less discount. Many taxpayers intended to take advantage of the recent offer, but before they could do so they were informed that others had got ahead of them and took the entire amount. They are now sorry that they did not do so earlier.

The short time in which the taxpayers paid in the full amount of $100,000 is generally regarded as an indication that the city is in splendid financial condition. When merchants and property owners have plenty of cash on hand and can find it better to use it than to save the small per cent of one and one-half cents on the dollar they say that money is easy. Taxes are not payable until September 20th, or rather not later than that time, and the fact that many are ready to pay now for the small discount is considered a good sign of the times.

WANT ANOTHER OFFER.

TAXPAYERS ARE ANXIOUS TO SAVE SMALL DISCOUNTS.

They Hope the City Will Need More Money and Offer a Second Inducement for Payment Now.

The taxpayers of the city are wondering if the city council will offer another discount for the payment of taxes now. The inducement offered a few days ago of one and one-half per cent on the payment of taxes up to $100.00 was taken advantage of by the property owning citizens and in three days the whole amount was paid.

Sometimes the city needs more than $100,000 during the summer, and it may be that another offer will be made soon like the first, or, perhaps, at a little less discount. Fraud and Dishonesty.

Success or failure; these are the words that tell the fate of all industries and enterprises. Capability, honesty and integrity are three elements of success, while failure follows dishonesty and unfairness. The medical profession furnishes many examples of this truth. Dr. Hathaway & Co. have secured a remarkable success while others have failed. Their success is due to the fact that their treatment is the best. They are true, genuine specialists. They recognize the fact that diseases of the human family should be treated only by human hands, and that the result of their own energy and thought. They give consultation free, and their charges for treatment are within the reach of all.

YOUNG AND MIDDLE-AGED MEN who are suffering from the effects of past or present indiscretions, youthful follies, which break down the body and make life a burden to yourself and friends, should not hesitate to get cured by our method, which is safe and sure. Remember, it is a permanent cure, also. STRICTURE. A new method. No cutting. The only rational method to effect a complete cure.

PILES. Great discovery. A cure guaranteed. No cutting or ligatures.

An Idea to Men Who Do an Office Business.

Has it ever occurred to you that the man who receives your letters forms an idea of the importance of your business by the quality and style of the stationery which you use?

Your stationery is certainly representative of your taste, and there is no effect upon those who receive your letters.

The most fashionable and elegant stationery now used is done from steel engravings and embossed. J. P. Stevens & Bro. do this work at prices but little more than ordinary type printed work, while the paper used is of much higher quality.

Call on J. P. Stevens & Bro., 47 Whitehall street, and ask to see their samples and get their prices before placing your order for office stationery.

A PROBLEM FOR THEM

Textile Men Will Consider an Interesting Question.

THEY MEET NEXT MONDAY

And Will Try To Decide How To Get Rid of Their Surplus Stock.

The Southern Textile Manufacturers' Association will meet in the auditorium of the Aragon hotel on Monday next. The convention will be attended by two hundred of the cotton mill men of the south, and the meeting will be one of vast importance not only to this section, but to the whole of the United States.

There are five hundred mills in the south and Secretary T. H. Martin has been notified that two-thirds of this number will be represented in the convention, either by the owners or by proxy. As stated before in The Constitution, the call for the convention was based upon the fact that the mills were holding enormous quantities of goods, and concerted action by the mill men was necessary to a profitable disposition of the stock. The urgency of the situation is now being held in the hands of the mills, and the enormous surplus of 7,000,000 yards of goods, uncalled for by the market.

These figures are obtained from the tabulated statements sent in by the mill owners. While the primary question to be decided by the convention will be the disposition of this surplus profitably and the adoption of such methods as will prevent further overproduction, another and much more important one will be discussed. It is the creation of a larger market for cotton goods manufactured in this section.

The question of curtailing the production of the mills has been a serious one for the association, and will be thoroughly discussed in the convention Monday. Several methods will be advocated, chiefly those closing down the mills entirely till the present over supply is exhausted, and closing down the mills semi-monthly for periods of one week.

The latter method will no doubt be adopted, as the majority of answers received to the circular letter sent out seem to favor this one.

To close down for a lengthy period would undoubtedly demoralize the factory help and for this reason a large number of the mill men are opposed to the plan. Addressed by the following mill men, all of whom are prominent throughout the south: Major J. F. Hanson, Macon; A. A. Maginnis, New Orleans; George A. Mebane, Asheville; D. O. Tomkins, Charlotte; J. C. Tomkins, Columbia; R. S. Reinhardt, Lincoln; S. Odenheimer, New Orleans; W. J. Kincaid, Griffin; C. M. Williams, Columbus; J. B. Goodwin, Anniston.

The convention will take up the question of enlarging the market for cotton goods, and it is well known that our cotton goods are but a small item in the foreign markets. England produces 2,000,000 spindles of cotton and finds a ready market for the product. America operates only 150,000 spindles and is confronted with a stagnant market. The existing difference in the two markets is well understood when it is known that England's exports to all foreign countries, while America's exports chiefly to America, France and Germany are also far ahead of America in the matter of exports to the rest of the world.

The convention Monday will make a strong movement toward advancing the American product into this larger foreign market, and the importance of the meeting to manufacturers is vast.

Unimproved blood causes that tired feeling. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood and gives vigor and vitality.

In Error. In our columns of yesterday we should have stated that the big dry goods warehouse of M. Rich & Bros. would begin remodeling their store July 20th, while we said January 20th. Their store will only continue until July 20th, when what is left of the stock will have to be moved to make room for carpenters, etc.

RIDERS WERE FINED.

THE BICYCLE SCORCHERS HAD TO PAY FOR THEIR FUN.

They Rode Slower Last Night—Some Exciting Incidents with the Brave Officers.

The three young bicyclists who were arrested by the regiment of policemen last Tuesday night for riding too fast for the safety of the public, were tried in the recorder's court Wednesday afternoon. Bob Tucker and John Stockman were fined $10.75 each. Will Dozier, the negro, who, it appears was not riding as fast as the others, was only given $5.75. None of the three were sent to the chain-gang.

Chief Connolly will keep the officers on Peachtree street until the fast riding is stopped, if it takes six months. The cops stood on their corners last night again, but the riders seemed to have learned a lesson from their unfortunate brothers, and rode a little slower than heretofore.

The determination of Chief Connolly formed much amusement among bicycle circles yesterday. The most interesting feature is watching the attempts of the officers to stop the scorches as they fly by most of them at a 2:40 gallop. The policemen did not experience as much trouble last night as on Tuesday night. They adopted a code of signals which worked to perfection, and was very few riders that ran the entire gauntlet.

One brave copper was stationed at the corner of Currier street. When he espied a scorching flying around the curve he would jump right in front of him and when a rider flew frantically could order the biker to stop. If the rider did not obey the officer would give his whistle a tool which would put the scorching into a guard. If the rider dodged the second officer, he would whistle to the third, who would either lie down in front of the bicycle or run his billy through the spokes, which always brought the ride to a dead standstill.

Will Go a-Fishing. Someone has suggested a plan which will probably be adopted if the riders continue to disregard the orders of the officers to halt.

The cops will be provided with long poles which will save them the necessity of running out, but the advocates of the scorching will be provided with a long pole which will save them the necessity of running out, but the advocates of the scorching will be provided with a long pole which will save them the necessity of running out.

Let He Could Ride By. Last night a well-known rider was upturned on his wheel, when the subject of Chief Connolly's war came up, and he bet the crowd $5 that he could run through the cops on Peachtree street, being upper. The bet was taken, and the rider gave the crowd time enough to ride out the street to see the rider pass.

The rider started down Peachtree about 9 o'clock. As he turned the curve at Forest avenue he was caught at a fearful rate. He passed the first cop without any trouble, but the sound of a shrill whistle split the air.

When the rider passed the second cop he encountered the third cop in the middle of the street. He dodged his billy, however, and made ready for the third with the same result. The fourth cop, who was prepared for the worst, the rider attempted to dodge. The cop was about to be struck amidships and made a dive for the wheel with his stick, but missed, and measured his full fall length on the asphalt. The rider won his bet.

It is said that several more such wagers are up for tonight and some lively fun is expected. The sight beats the opera for a good show.
